Call for Papers - Special Issue of Journal Betekintő

Social Resistance in the 1980s

Betekintő (English: Insight) is an academic journal published by the Historical Archives of the Hungarian State Security, invites proposal submissions for a special English issue on the subject of Social Resistance in the 1980s.

Betekintő primarily examines the cultural, social and political backgrounds of the former East-Central and Southeast European socialist regimes. Our interdisciplinary journal also focuses on better understanding the secret services held for observing and repressing the subjected societies. Thereby Betekintő is essential reading for independent scholars, lay people, professors, and students.

This special issue invites research papers and case studies that examine interactions between late-socialist power and oppositional groups or figures in the 1980s.

Topics of Interest:

- oppositional, national independence, religious or ecopolitical movements and organizations
- cultural circles and the underground publicity
- Marxist or other left-oriented oppositional groups and organizations
- subcultural communities or specific social minorities struggling the oppressive power
- subversive activity of the secret police against oppositional figures or movements
- international relations
- key figures biography
- symbolic events analysis
- individual or socially accepted „survival tactics” in daily routine

The deadline for the submission of abstracts no longer than 300 words: May 31, 2022.

The manuscript that consist maximum of 40 000 characters (notes, and bibliography not included) will be published after a double-blind peer-review process. We provide proofreading for contributors who are not native speakers of English.
